WILSON'S PERSONAL TREATY. Woodrow Wilson's chickens are coming loose to most. Every day he realises that fact. He is now reaping the limits of ego flowently this prison hasn't acceptand, if he suppords in gaining any reorganities from his earof peace it will be after admitting the libity of the position be took when he first assumed the role of distator in chief to the with equal torce that these pills oppressed of Europe. Not satisfied with the warning from the got good for anything that alla you senate that the treaty will never be accepted in its present from Mr. Wilson has resorted again to vituperation in placing the blams on "the hyphons,". If he decres to stigmatize the senate he will find that body indifferent to his epithets for they can houst of better American blood than ever filtered through the veins of the chief excentive or any of his following. The president says the question is whether "The United States will keep its pledges to help guarantee the peace of Europe. "That is where the big mistake comes in. The United States is not pledged to anything done in the council chamber at Paris for the reason that the actions of that body were not governed by the constitutional authority of the United States. Mr. Wilson was scated in that council without any more right than any American individual since he deliberately overrade the constitution of this country in arrogating to himself the right of acting for his country. The treaty now before the senate is a Wilson treaty. It is not an American treaty for the reason that in essaying to encompass peace the president failed to consult the United States senate, a co-ordinate part of the treaty-making power of the country under whose constitution he was assuming to act. Not having consulted the senate either of notions is carched and then right before, during the deliberations or after their adoption the articles agreed upon lack binding force. Mr. Wilson has been soying a lot about the humiliation of this country in the event of rojection, but he uses the phrase in a Pickwickian sense, since he never was vested with the powers he pretended to exercise at Versailles.

SWITZERLAND WARY OF LEAGUE. "Switzerland is a wonderful nation," declared Major J. A Louder, of Pittsburgh, in an interview with a Washington Post A. Homer Black correspondent recently. "It is a melting pot in a way for various nations. This country is perhaps the greatest experimental field in the world in many lines-politically, economically, and socially." But Switzerland is unwilling to accept the invitation to join the league of nations unless she can do so on her own terms and with her own reservations. To enter unreservedly is an experiment she is unwilling to try. The United States is also a melting pot, far greater than Switzerland. Thirty-three per cent of our population is of foreign nativity or of foreign parentage. We have been doing some experimenting ourselves in the political field of late years, without any particular benefits derived therefrom. and our economic experiments have about rained the country. Switzerland's attitude toward the league is very much like that of the vast majority of the American people. And we have nearly complishing a deed of valor as per.
